DEN TAYLOR TELLS BUSINESSWEEK
WHY CORPORATE SPYING IS SO EASY

DATELINE: STAMFORD, CT; March 21, 2007... Den Taylor, Managing Partner, Strategic Insights, was quoted in the 2/26/07 online edition and 3/19/07 print edition of BusinessWeek under the caption, 'Why Corporate Spying is So Easy.' Den's insightful comments were in response to an article entitled, 'Spies, Lies & KPMG' that provided an insider's look at how KPMG was infiltrated by a private intelligence firm.

"I read with great interest your recent article, 'Spies, Lies & KPMG' (Investigations, February 26, 2007). As a strategic intelligence professional, I have often been asked by clients to provide counterintelligence counsel to deal with circumstances similar to those you describe. What is invariably found in such cases is that in an increasingly globalized economy, intelligence gathering by any means is a simple fact of life. Unfortunately, many organizations do not convey this information to their employees, making them easy prey to the entreaties of individuals utilizing simple forms of pretext."
